PEDDLER GETS STUNG, WHILE BROKER GETS OFF EASY, SAYS ALD. KRUMDICK

The unfairness of a license system under which a street peddler is taxed as much per year as a LaSalle street brokerage house was the subject of comment today by Ald. Krumdick, a member of the council's license committee.

"The man who sells potatoes from a wagon at your back door," said Ald. Krumdick, "pays a city license of $50 a year for each wagon he runs. La Salle street brokers pay but this much, no matter how much business they do."

Ald. Krumdick expects to introduce an ordinance requiring brokers to pay at least $500 and perhaps $1,000 a year license, with an additional fee of $50 for every solicitor the broker has working for him. He believes a high brokerage license fee would benefit both brokers and their clients, as it might tend to drive some of the fly-by-night brokers out of La Salle street.

Krumdick is also investigating the feasibility of requiring grocers and South Water street commission men to pay a city license.
